New Brunswick

To be considered for nomination as a skilled worker under the New Brunswick Provincial Nominee Program, you require a permanent, full-time job offer from an established New Brunswick company. The job must meet provincial employment standards and offer comparable industry rates of pay. In most cases, the skills offered by the potential immigrant are not readily available in New Brunswick and employers must demonstrate that they are having difficulty finding these skills in the local job market.

As an applicant to the New Brunswick Provincial Nominee Program, you must make a commitment to settle permanently in New Brunswick and are required to sign a declaration stating your intention to live and work in this province. Provincial Nominees are likely to see their application for immigration to Canada processed expeditiously.

1. Complete the If-Assessment Guide

To be considered for immigration under the New Brunswick Provincial Nominee Program, you must obtain a minimum of 50 points. Greater consideration will be given to applicants whose employment fills a skill shortage in New Brunswick.

2. Start your employment search

If you score at least 50 points, you should initiate a search for employment in New Brunswick. Finding and negotiating an offer of employment is your responsibility. Your application will only be considered when you have a guaranteed job offer from a New Brunswick employer for work in New Brunswick.

3. Assess your credentials/qualifications

In Canada, approximately 20 percent of occupations are regulated to protect the health and safety of Canadians (e.g. nurses, engineers, electricians, etc.). People who want to work in regulated occupations need to obtain a license from a provincial regulatory body. Licensing requirements often include education from a recognized school, Canadian work experience and completion of a technical exam. Fees for exams can be costly and are the responsibility of the applicant. Final assessment by the provincial authority can only be done after you are in Canada with permanent residence status. For non-regulated occupations, recognition is normally at the discretion of the employer. Employment is subject to demand, and qualification requirements are set by individual employers.

4. Submit the completed Guaranteed Job Offer form

When you have your acceptance of a job offer in writing, your employer must complete and submit the Guaranteed Job Offer form.

5. Submit an application for Immigration

You must organize the forms and supporting documents according to the Document Checklist included in the Application Guide and forward the complete application to the Population Growth Secretariat.

6. Written notice of the final decision

Upon final review of the completed application, you will receive written notification of the decision about nomination for immigration under the New Brunswick Provincial Nominee Program. If you have been nominated, your application will be forwarded to the appropriate Canadian Visa Office for final
